

Michael Walzer

"Morality and Universalism in Jewish Thought"

Wednesday, January 26, 7:30 p.m., Hanes Art Center Auditorium

Walzer, of the Princeton Institute for Advanced Study, will describe and analyze two very different Jewish approaches to moral universalism. The first is rabbinic, first suggested in the Talmud and developed by medieval writers. The second is the work of reformers and philosophers in the 19th and 20th centuries, who drew mostly on the prophets rather than the rabbis, and who were interested above all in social and economic justice.

Jennifer Stollman

"Southern Jewish Activists: The Response of Nineteenth-Century Women to Anti-Semitism"

Thursday, February 10, 7:30 p.m., Hanes Art Center Auditorium

Historians have only recently begun to investigate how 19th-century Jewish women contributed to fighting anti-Semitism and inspiring fidelity to Judaism. Jennifer Stollman, Assistant Professor of History at Salem College, explores how antebellum and Civil War southern Jewish women fought national and international anti-Semitism and encouraged Jewish observance, in the South and nationally, through their private and published writings. Co-sponsored by the Department of Religious Studies, Department of Women's Studies, Curriculum in American Studies, and the Center for the Study of the American South.

Joan Nathan

"350 Years of Jewish Cooking in America"

Tuesday, February 15, 7:30 p.m., Hanes Art Center Auditorium

Joan Nathan, a nationally acclaimed cookbook author, is also host and producer of the 26-part PBS series "Jewish Cooking in America with Joan Nathan." Her television series, based on her award-winning cookbook Jewish Cooking in America, uses food as a way to portray the culture and history of the Jewish experience in America. In this lecture, she will trace the history and culture of Jews in America through the different waves of immigration. Co-sponsored by North Carolina Hillel, Department of Religious Studies, Department of Women's Studies, Curriculum in American Studies, and the Center for the Study of the American South.

"United States Holocaust Memorial Museum: Design Insights"

Tuesday, March 8, 7:30 pm, Hanes Art Center Auditorium

Appelbaum has planned, produced, and designed award-winning museum exhibitions, visitor centers, and educational environments. In this lecture, he will give a photographic walk-through of the design decisions and process used to create the permanent exhibitions of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum.

Warren Bass

"Support Any Friend: Kennedy's Middle East and the Making of the US-Israel Alliance"

Tuesday, March 22, 7:30 p.m., Toy Lounge

From the Oval Office to secret diplomatic missions to Cairo and Tel Aviv, Warren Bass offers new insights into the Kennedy presidency that was pivotal in creating the U.S.-Israel alliance and the modern Middle East. Bass is a senior editor at the Washington Post's Book World section, where he handles reviews of nonfiction books on history, foreign policy, current events, and politics. Co-sponsored by North Carolina Hillel and Carolina Students for Israel.

Bernice Steinhardt

"Fabric of Survival: The Art of Esther Nisenthal Krinitz"

Tuesday, March 29, 7:30 p.m., Hanes Art Center Auditorium

Steinhardt, founder and head of Art and Remembrance, will discuss the art and story of Esther Nisenthal Krinitz (1927-2001), a Holocaust survivor who grew up in a village in central Poland. A self-taught artist, she created a series of 36 embroidery and fabric collage pictures, with stitched narrative, depicting her childhood and wartime experiences. The presentation will include selected images from the series and a 13-minute video interview with Krinitz, produced by the filmmaker Lawrence Kasdan. Co-sponsored by the Department of Religious Studies, Department of Women's Studies, Curriculum in American Studies, and the Center for the Study of the American South.

Pamela Nadell

"From Haven to Home: Celebrating 350 Years of American Jewish Life"

Tuesday, April 5, 7:30 p.m., Hanes Art Center Auditorium

In September 2004 American Jews began a year long commemoration of their 350th anniversary in the golden land. Nadell, professor of History and director of the Jewish Studies program at American University, will look back at how America's Jews celebrated both the 250th and 300th anniversaries of the founding of their community and consider those to whom America offered haven and the homes they constructed. Co-sponsored by the Department of Religious Studies, Department of Women's Studies, Curriculum in American Studies, and the Center for the Study of the American South.

Public lectures made possible by a grant from the Charles H. Revson Foundation in honor of Eli N. Evans, '58.

All lectures free and open to the public. Parking will be available in the Swain lot.
