

University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill Center for European Studies

About Us · Calendar · Business & Media · Academic Programs · Teaching Resources · Research & Funding

a b o u t u s

features
contact
faculty
staff

Faculty

CES is a research center serving as an interdisciplinary support hub for faculty across many different departments and professional schools at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. This section profiles faculty members affiliated with the Center for European Studies whose research and teaching engage contemporary Europe.

- Click here for a printer-friendly document profiling all faculty \(PDF\).
- See also: UNC-Chapel Hill International Expertise Database.

City and Regional Planning

HARVEY GOLDSTEIN

Dr. Goldstein serves as director of both the Ph.D. Program and the Economic Development specialization. Dr. Goldstein is also the U.S. coordinator of the Network for European and U.S. Regional and Urban Studies, a network of faculty and students on both continents. Dr. Goldstein teaches courses in analytic techniques of economic development planning, planning theory, and research methods. He has served as a consultant to such organizations as the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, the U.S. Employment and Training Administration, the United Nations Development Programme, the U.S. Agency for International Development, the Research Triangle Institute, and various state and local economic development agencies. He has designed and taught training courses nationally and internationally on economic impact analysis, labor market information, and regional employment forecasting.

▲ Back to Top

MICHAEL LUGER

Mike Luger, Professor of Public Policy, Business, and Planning (AB, MPA, Princeton and MCP, Ph.D., University of California at Berkeley). He has been a visiting professor at the Wirtschaftsuniversitat Wien and the University of Auckland. He serves as the Director of the Carolina Center for Competitive Economies. His research topics include infrastructure provision and finance; technology policy; universities and economic development; and housing and labor markets. Luger has been a consultant for the World Bank, OECD, the EU, many national governments, and others. He is on the editorial board of several journals, including the Journal of Comparative Public Policy and Economic Development Quarterly. He currently is the North American representative on a multi-year project funded by the EU, tracking and comparing the innovation economies of countries around the world.

▲ Back to Top

Economics

STANLEY BLACK

Stanley W. Black, III, (Ph. D. in Economics, Yale University). From 1966 to 1972 he was Assistant Professor at Princeton University and from 1973 to 1983 Associate and then Full Professor at Vanderbilt University. His government experience has included service with the President's Council of Economic Advisers, the Federal Reserve Board, and the Department of State. He has been a visiting scholar at Reserve Board, and the Department of State. He has been a visiting scholar or professor at the Institute of International Economics in Stockholm, the University of Siena, Yale University, the Brookings Institution, the International Monetary Fund, and was Bundesbank Visiting Professor at the Free University in Berlin in Summer 1997. In 1983 he returned to the University of North Carolina as Georges Lurcy

Professor of Economics, serving as Department Chairman from 1985 to 1990. From 1994 to 1997 he was nonresident Director of Economic Studies for the American Institute of Contemporary German Studies of the Johns Hopkins University in Washington, DC. From 2000 to 2001 he was Senior Policy Advisor at the IMF Institute, on leave from the University of North Carolina. Dr. Black has worked primarily on problems of floating exchange rates and macroeconomic policy, especially the asset market theory of floating exchange rates with rational expectations. His recent work relates to the behavior of exchange rates, the international use of currencies, and European economic issues. He has written or edited six books, including Floating Exchange Rates and National Economic Policy (1977), Europe's Economy Looks East (1997), Competition and Convergence in Financial Markets (1998), and Globalization, Technological Change and Labor Markets (1998). He has published over 80 scholarly articles, comments, or reviews in economics journals and books. Recent papers include "Convertibility Risk: The Precautionary Demand for Foreign Currency in a Crisis," Annals of Finance (2005) and forthcoming, "International Monetary Institutions," in The New Palgrave Dictionary of Economics (2006).

<http://www.unc.edu/~swblack>

 Back to Top

PATRICK CONWAY

Patrick Conway (Ph.D., MPA, Princeton University). In recent years he has taught graduate-level courses in the Economics department in international trade, international finance and economic development, while at the undergraduate level he has taught a number of courses in international economics, economic development and introductory economics as well as a senior honors seminar. He has recently introduced a course entitled "The Economics of North Carolina" with documentation in large part on the World Wide Web. His economic research in recent years has followed three paths. The first is the international aspects of transition for formerly Soviet economies; to conduct this research he has visited Belarus, Georgia, Kazakhstan and Ukraine on a number of occasions. He has also written on the macroeconomic impact of IMF adjustment programs, and is presently working on extensions to that work. He also investigates the theoretical explanations and empirical implications of international trade between developed and developing countries, with a special focus on trade in textiles and apparel. <http://www.unc.edu/home/pconway>

 Back to Top

STEVEN ROSEFELDE

Steven Rosefelde is a Professor of Economics (Ph.D., Harvard University), and a member of the Russian Academy of Natural Sciences. His research is focused on two projects. First, a publication on the global reconfiguration of wealth and power, which will be completed this fall at the National Humanities Center; and another book entitled Forgotten Superpower dealing with Russia's modernization prospects and international security, funded by a grant from the Carnegie Corporation of New York. A third book on comparative economic systems is in the final editing phase.

 Back to Top

Environmental Sciences & Engineering

RICHARD N. L. (PETE) ANDREWS

Richard (Pete) Andrews (A.B. Yale University, Master of Regional Planning and Ph.D. UNC-Chapel Hill) is the Thomas Willis Lambeth Distinguished Professor of Public Policy at UNC-Chapel Hill, with appointments in the Departments of Public Policy, City and Regional Planning, Environmental Sciences and Engineering, the Curriculum in Ecology, and the Carolina Environmental Program. He is the author of Managing the Environment, Managing Ourselves: A History of American Environmental Policy (Yale, 1999); Environmental Policy and Administrative Change: Implementation of the National Environmental Policy Act (Lexington Books, 1976); and over 50 articles and book chapters on environmental politics and policy.

In addition to the United States, he has worked on comparative studies of environmental policy in the U.S. and Europe and on environmental policy problems as a Fulbright scholar in Austria and Bulgaria, with U.S. AID support in the Czech Republic and Thailand, and as a Peace Corps Volunteer in Nepal. He is a Fellow of the National Academy of Public Administration and of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, former section chair of AAAS's Section on Societal Impacts of Science and Engineering, and a member of Sigma Xi and the Delta Omega Public Health Honor Society. <http://www.unc.edu/~andrewsr/>

 Back to Top

DOUGLAS CRAWFORD-BROWN

Dr. Crawford-Brown received his PhD in Nuclear Physics from the Georgia Institute of Technology in 1980. He currently is Professor in the Department of Environmental Sciences and Engineering, the Department of Public Policy, and the Curriculum in Ecology at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He also is Director of the campus-wide Carolina Environmental Program, and Director of the CEP's International Environmental Assessment and Energy Policy Program conducted at Cambridge, England. He has published more than 130 articles in a variety of fields related to environmental science and studies, as well as 4 books on topics related to modeling of environmental phenomena and the role of environmental science and philosophy in public policy. www.unc.edu/~dcrawfor/doug.htm

 Back to Top

Geography

JOHN PICKLES

John Pickles is Earl N. Phillips Distinguished Chair of International Studies. His primary research interests focus on political economy and economic geographies of development, and on geographies of social change. He has recently completed work on a new book on the social history and geography of mapping: A History of Spaces: Cartographic Reason, Mapping, and the Geo-Coded World (Routledge 2004).

 Back to Top

Germanic Languages and Literatures (20th Century)

CLAYTON KOELB

After completing graduate study in Comparative Literature at Harvard, Clayton Koelb began his teaching career in 1969 at the University of Chicago teaching literary criticism and theory, modern German literature, comparative literature, and serving for several years as chair of Chicago's Department of Germanic Languages and Literatures. In 1991 he took up his current position as the Guy B. Johnson Professor at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. At Carolina he offers courses in both German and comparative literature and currently chairs the Department of Germanic Languages. Professor Koelb's early scholarship was on leading figures of early twentieth-century German literature, particularly Franz Kafka and Thomas Mann. His latest book, Legendary Figures (1998), examines revolutionary views of the past that have played a crucial role in European and American literature of the last 150 years. He is currently at work on a number of projects on German writers, including contributions to the Encyclopedia of German Literature, The Thomas Mann Companion, The Franz Kafka Companion, and the New History of German Literature. A Franz Kafka encyclopedia, co-authored by Koelb and several other American Kafka scholars, is planned for publication in the near future.

 Back to Top

ALICE KUZNIAR

Alice A. Kuzniar (MA, Ph.D., Princeton University) is Professor of German and Comparative Literature at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. She has authored Delayed Endings: Nonclosure in Novalis and Hoelderlin (UGA Press, 1987) and The Queer German Cinema (Stanford UP, 2000), Melancholia's Dog (U of Chicago P, 2006), as well as edited Outing Goethe and His Age (Stanford UP, 1996). Her diverse interests include cinema, gender and sexuality studies, animal studies, as well as German Romanticism and Idealism.

 Back to Top

RICHARD LANGSTON

Assistant Professor Richard Langston (Ph.D. Washington University in Saint Louis) is Director of the Department of German Language Program. The foci of his graduate studies included 20th-century and contemporary German literature, European intellectual history, literary theory and cultural studies. He joined the faculty at UNC-CH in the fall of 2002, and is currently finishing a book project tentatively entitled Visions of Violence: German Avant-Gardes after Fascism.

SIEGFRIED MEWS

Siegfried Mews (pronounced "maves") is Professor of German at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He has published widely on the subject of nineteenth- and twentieth-century German literature and culture and taught both undergraduate and graduate courses in this general area. Among his publications are fourteen (co)edited and authored books, more than one hundred articles in scholarly journals and collections of essays, and approximately one hundred book reviews. He has also held a number of administrative and editorial positions and served as an elected officer of various professional organizations: Editor and Managing Editor, University of North Carolina Studies in the Germanic Languages and Literatures (1968-1980); Executive Director and Treasurer, South Atlantic Modern Language Assoc. (SAML A; Nov. 1983-Nov. 1989); Editor, South Atlantic Review (Nov. 1983-Nov. 1989); Chair, Dept. of Germanic Languages, UNC (July 1989-June 1994; term of office began Jan. 1990); Chair, Modern Language Assoc. of America, Division of Twentieth-Century German Literature (1990); Vice President, SAML A (Nov. 1990-Nov. 1991); President, SAML A (Nov. 1991-Nov. 1992); Program Director, German Studies Assoc. (1992); President, NC Chapter of American Assoc. of Teachers of German (1995-1997); Vice President, International Brecht Society (1994-1998); President, International Brecht Society (1998-2002); Interim Chair, Dept. of Germanic Languages, UNC (July-Dec.1999). In addition, he organized and co-directed two seminars for college and university teachers, which were funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities, in Berlin (1998, 2000).

Among his abiding scholarly and research interests are Bertolt Brecht (in 1997, he edited A Bertolt Brecht Reference Companion), one of the most influential twentieth-century playwrights as well as a renowned practitioner and theoretician of the theater, and novelist Günter Grass, winner of the Nobel Prize in 1999. During the last few years Siegfried Mews has tended to teach, write, and lecture on the problems arising from the intersection of literature and politics - a problem that has gained new poignancy as a result of the developments occurring after the fall of the Berlin Wall and German reunification. These events appear to mark the end of the postwar period. In particular, the shifting of the center of political power in Germany from the West (the former capital of Bonn on the Rhine) to the East (the old capital of Berlin) raises intriguing questions as to the future of European integration and transatlantic relations.

<http://www.unc.edu/depts/german/personnel/mews-v.html>

 Back to Top

DAVID PIKE

Professor Pike (Ph.D., Stanford University) has spent the better part of his professional life studying cultural issues associated with the ideological and political history of German communism. In 1983 he received the German Studies Association book prize for German Writers in Soviet Exile, 1933-1945, which was published in both German and English. He became a German Professor at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill in 1988 and was recognized with the reception of the John B. Caroll Distinguished Professor of Germanic Language award. With the support of the Volkswagen-Stiftung, in the coming years Professor Pike intends to continue gathering relevant material related to the Soviet occupation of Germany held in the National Archives in Washington, in various formerly East German archives (SED, secret police, etc.), and in a number of Russian archives in Moscow for a publication dealing more specifically with Soviet politics and cultural policy in Soviet-occupied Germany.

 Back to Top

History

CHRIS BROWNING

Christopher Browning (BA, Oberlin College; MA, Ph.D., University of Wisconsin-Madison). Professor Browning joined the UNC-CH faculty in the fall of 1999. His publications include: The Origins of the Final Solution (2004), Collected Memories: Holocaust History and Postwar Testimony (2003), Nazi Policy, Jewish Labor, German Killers (2000), Ordinary Men: Reserve Police Battalion 101 and the Final Solution in Poland (1992), The Path to Genocide (1992), Fateful Months: Essays on the Emergence of the Final Solution (1985), and The Final Solution and the German Foreign Office (1978). In the spring of 1999, he gave the George Macaulay Trevelyan Lectures at Cambridge University. He has served as an expert witness in several Nazi crimes trials and in the Holocaust denial trials of Crown vs. Ernst Zuendel in Toronto in 1988 and David Irving vs. Penguin Books and Deborah Lipstadt in London in 2000. He is currently working on a case study of the complex of Jewish factory slave labor camps in Starachowice in central Poland, based on 244 survivor testimonies.

 Back to Top

CHAD BRYANT

Chad Bryant's (MA, Ph.D., UC-Berkeley) research and teaching interests include nationalism, state practices, and the politics of everyday life in modern Eastern Europe. His current research project examines Nazi rule and nationality politics in the occupied Czechlands from 1939 to 1945. Two articles on the subject appeared in the Winter 2002 issues of Slavic Review and Kudej, a Czech-language journal of cultural history. A related research project resulted in "Whose Nation? Czech Dissidents and History Writing from a Post-1989 Perspective" (History and Memory, Spring/Summer 2000). Bryant is also interested in Czech-German relations during World War I and the history of travel to, from, and within Eastern Europe.

 Back to Top

KAREN HAGEMANN

Karen Hagemann (M.A., Ph.D. University of Hamburg, Habil. Technical University of Berlin) joined the UNC-CH faculty in July 2005. Her research in Modern German and European history and Women's and Gender history (18th to 20th centuries) includes studies in the fields of the history of welfare states, social and population policy, labor history, family history and the history of everyday lives, as well as the history of the women's movement. The more recent research focuses on a gendered cultural history of the military, war and the nation, the history of masculinity and citizenship, and on a comparative gender history of welfare and education systems. She is director of the international project group "Nations, Borders, Identities. The Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars in European European Experiences and Memories", funded by the Arts and Humanities Research Council and the German Research Foundation. Moreover she is directing the interdisciplinary and international research project "State - Children - family: The Politics of Public Education and Child Care in Postwar Europe - An East-West Comparison" (funded by the Volkswagen Foundation). Her most recent books include: Gendered Nations. Nationalisms and Gender Order in the Long Nineteenth Century (edited with Ida Blom and Cathrine Hall, 2000); Home/Front. Military and Gender in 20th Century Germany (ed. with Stefanie Schüler-Springorum, 2002); " Männlicher Mut und Teutsche Ehre." Nation, Militär und Geschlecht zur Zeit der Antinapoleonischen Kriege Preussens (2002); Masculinities in Politics and War. Rewritings of Modern History (ed. with Stefan Dudink and John Tosh, 2004); Frieden - Gewalt - Geschlecht. Friedens- und Konfliktforschung als Geschlechter-forschung (ed. with Jennifer Davy and Ute Kätzel, 2005).

<http://www.unc.edu/depts/history/faculty/hagemann.html>

KONRAD JARAUSCH

Konrad H. Jarausch is Lurcy Professor of European Civilization and has written or edited about thirty books in modern German history. Starting with Hitler's seizure of power and the First World War, his research interests have moved to the social history of German students or professions and most recently, he has been concerned with German unification in 1989/90, with historiography under the Communist GDR, debates about historical memory and with the process of recivilization after 1945. At the same time he has been involved in discussions about quantitative methods in history, problems of postmodernism and transnational history. For part of the year he serves as co-director of a new research institute on contemporary history in Potsdam, devotes special efforts to training graduate students, and has produced several dozen PhDs in Modern European History.

<http://www.unc.edu/depts/history/faculty/jarausch.html>

LLOYD KRAMER

Lloyd Kramer (MA, Boston College, Ph.D., Cornell University). His research interests focus on Modern European History with an emphasis on 19th century France. He is particularly interested in historical processes that shape cultural identities, including the experiences of cross-cultural exchange and the emergence of modern nationalism. Other research and teaching interests deal with the roles of intellectuals in modern societies, the theoretical foundations of historical knowledge, and the evolving field of "cultural studies." His teaching stresses the importance of reading, discussing, and writing about influential books in various eras of European history and world history. In recent years he has developed a growing interest in Global History, and now teaches a course called "Global Issues in the Twentieth Century." One recurring theme in all of his research and teaching stresses the importance of cross-cultural exchanges in modern world history. Publications include Threshold of a New World: Intellectuals and the Exile Experience in Paris, 1830-1848 (1988); Lafayette in Two Worlds: Public Cultures and Personal Identities in an Age of Revolutions (1996); Nationalism: Political Cultures in Europe and America, 1775-1865; co-editor of Learning History in America: Schools, Cultures and Politics (1994); "Literature Criticism, and Historical Imagination: The Literary Challenge of Hayden White and Dominick LaCapra," in Lynn Hunt, ed., The New Cultural History (1989).

DONALD REID

Donald Reid (MA, Ph.D., Stanford University). His major fields of research are French political, social and cultural history, 1815-present. He has written The Miners of Decazeville: A Genealogy of Deindustrialization (Harvard University Press, 1985) and Paris Sewers and Sewermen: Realities and Representations (Harvard University Press, 1991) and co-edited Intellectuals and Public Life: Between Radicalism and Reform (Cornell University Press, 1996). He is finishing a book on the communist libertarian and homme de lettres Daniel Guérin. The subjects of dissertations completed under his direction include the League of the Rights of Man and memory of the Dreyfus Affair; the first women ministers in France; and the culture of beurs, individuals of North African ancestry living in France.

RICHARD SOLOWAY

Richard Soloway (MA, Ph.D., University of Wisconsin). His research and teaching interests are in modern British social history. Initially he concentrated upon religion and industrialization in the early 19th century, publishing Prelates and People: Ecclesiastical Social Thought in England, 1783-1852 (London: Routledge and Kegan Paul, 1969), among other works. Since then his primary concentration has been on the history of eugenics, birth control and population change in the later 19th and 20th centuries. Research into these areas has resulted in several articles and two books published by the University of North Carolina Press, Birth Control and the Population Question in England, 1877-1930 (1982) and Demography and Degeneration: Eugenics and the Declining Birthrate in Twentieth-Century Britain (1990; new paperback edition, 1995). Currently he is working on a book that examines the history of contraceptive research in Britain and America in the years between the first and second world wars.

School of Journalism and Mass Communication

PHILIP MEYER

Philip Meyer joined the faculty of the School of Journalism and Mass Communication at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1981 as a Kenan Professor. He became a Knight Professor in 1993 and began phased retirement in 2005. In October 2005, he was named a Fellow of the Society of Professional Journalists for "extraordinary contributions to the profession of journalism." His academic career was preceded by 23 years as a reporter, Washington correspondent, and market researcher for Knight Ridder Inc. He has been president of the American Association for Public Opinion Research, the World Association for Public Opinion Research, and the Council for the Advancement of Science Writing. His most recent book is The Vanishing Newspaper: Saving

Journalism in the Information Age (Missouri, 2004). He has served on the editorial boards of Public Opinion Quarterly, Newspaper Research Journal, and International Journal of Public Opinion Research and contributed more than 50 op-ed pieces to USA Today. www.unc.edu/~pmeyer

ROBERT STEVENSON

Dr. Stevenson, Kenan Professor at the School of Journalism and Mass Communication, is author of Global Communication in the 21st Century and Communication, Development, and the Third World and co-editor of Foreign News and the New World Information Order. He was associate editor of Journalism Quarterly and a member of the editorial board of the Journal of Communication. Dr. Stevenson has been a Fulbright Senior Scholar at Johannes Gutenberg University (Mainz), assistant director of the American Journalism Center of Budapest, Eric Voegelin Professor at Ludwig Maximilians University (Munich), DAAD Visiting Professor at the University of Technology of Dresden, visiting professor at the University of Erfurt, and has held short-term visiting professorships at the Center for Social Research (ZUMA) (Mannheim), Babes-Bolyai University (Cluj-Napoca, Romania), and the University of Canberra. He has lectured in about 25 countries. His research interests focus on international communication, political communication, and research methods.

School of Law

MICHAEL CORRADO

Professor Michael Corrado (Ph.D., University of Chicago) is a member of the Steering Committee for the Center for European Studies and a member of the University Center for International Studies Advisory Committee. He is the author/editor of Comparative Constitutional Review: A Casebook and Editor-in-Chief, Law and Philosophy. His research interests focus on Civil Law Tradition (Europe, Latin America, Japan, etc.) and International Litigation.

ARTHUR WEISBURD

Arthur Weisburd (JD, University of Michigan) He is currently an Associate Professor at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill Law School and teaches courses on international law. Professor Weisburd was an Officer in the Foreign Service of the United States from 1970-73. His research interests include Civil Procedure, International Law, Antitrust Law, and law relating to political speech and organization.

Political Science

LIESBET HOOGHE

Professor of Political Science at UNC-Chapel Hill, Liesbet Hooghe received her Ph.D from the University of Leuven in Belgium in 1989. Before joining UNC in 2000, she taught at the University of Toronto (1994-2000), and held research fellowships at Cornell University, Oxford University (Nuffield), and the European University Institute (Florence, Italy). Since 2004, she has been affiliated to the Free University of Amsterdam. Her principal areas of interest are comparative politics (Europe and the European Union), identity, political parties, and political elites. Over the past years she has also researched ethnic conflict, nationalism and federalism. She teaches undergraduate and graduate courses in the political science department, in the Curriculum for International Studies, and the Transatlantic Masters Program. She is the editor of Cohesion Policy and European Integration: Building Multilevel Governance (OUP, 1996); co-author with Gary Marks of Multi-Level Governance in the European Union (Rowman & Littlefield, 2001); and author of a book on the political preferences of top European Commission officials, The European Commission and European Integration: Images of Governance (2002). She was Chair of the European Politics and Society Section of the APSA, and is vice-chair of the European Studies Association. Professor Hooghe has published articles a.o. in the American Political Science Review, British Journal of Political Science, Comparative Political Studies, European Union Politics, International Organization, Journal of Common Market Studies, and West European Politics.

EVELYNE HUBER

Evelyne Huber, Morehead Alumni Distinguished Professor and Chair of the Department of Political Science, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, is coauthor of Capitalist Development and Democracy, University of Chicago Press, 1992, and Development and Crisis of the Welfare State, University of Chicago Press, 2001; and editor of Models of Capitalism: Lessons for Latin America, Pennsylvania State University Press, 2002. She continues to investigate the impact of democracy, political power distributions, and transitions to open economies on systems of social protection and investment in human capital in Latin America and the Caribbean, comparing that experience to the one of advanced industrial societies.

STUART MACDONALD

Professor of Political Science, Stuart MacDonal received her Ph.D. from the University of Michigan in 1987. Her principal areas of interest are political behavior and research methods. She teaches courses in the graduate sequence in methodology and the Political Science Honors Program. She has also taught in the Summer Program in Quantitative Methods of the Inter-University Consortium in Ann Arbor, Michigan. Professor Macdonald has contributed articles to the American Political Science Review, American Journal of Political Science, The Journal of Politics, Comparative Political Studies, and the British Journal of Political Science, among others. Her work with George Rabinowitz and Ola Listhaug has received two national awards from the American Political Science Association: the 1989 Pi Sigma Alpha Award for the best paper presented at the Annual Meetings and the 1992 Heinz Eulau Prize for the best article in the American Political Science Review. Her current research explores theories of issue voting and party success in the United States and Europe.

GARY MARKS

Gary Marks is Burton Craige Professor of Political Science at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, and Professor in the Chair for the study of multi-level governance at the Free University of Amsterdam. He is Director of the UNC Center for European Studies and has served as Chair of the European Community Studies Association. Marks' teaching and research interests lie in the field of comparative politics. Marks' recent books include Multi-Level Governance and European Integration (with Liesbet Hooghe; Rowman & Littlefield, 2001), It Didn't Happen Here: Why Socialism Failed in the United States (with Seymour Martin Lipset; Norton, 2000), Continuity and Change in Contemporary Capitalism (coedited with Herbert Kitschelt, Peter Lange, and John Stephens; CUP 1999) and European Integration and Political Conflict (co-edited with Marco Steenbergen, CUP 2004). He recently edited a special issue of Electoral Studies, "Comparing Measures Of Party Positioning: Expert, Manifesto, And Survey Data." <http://www.unc.edu/~gwmarks/>

LAYNA MOSLEY

Layna Mosley researches and teaches in the areas of international relations and Layna Mosley researches and teaches in the areas of international relations and international political economy. She is author of Global Capital and National Governments (Cambridge University Press, 2003), which explores the impact of global capital markets on government policy choices. Mosley's current research explores the impact of multinational production on labor rights; the role of private sector actors in the creation and enforcement of international financial regulations; and the impact of EMU, as well as private finance, on fiscal policymaking in Europe. Mosley received her Ph.D. from Duke University, and spent five years on the faculty at the University of Notre Dame. www.unc.edu/~lmosley/

▲ Back to Top

THOMAS OATLEY

Thomas Oatley (Ph.D. in Political Science, Emory University) serves as Assistant Professor of the Department of Political Science at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and is a member of the American Political Science Association. He is the author of Monetary Politics: Exchange Rate Cooperation in the European Union, published by Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 1997. His research interests include origins of the European Economic Community.

▲ Back to Top

JOHN STEPHENS

John D. Stephens, Gerhard E. Lenski, Jr., Distinguished Professor of Political Science and Sociology, received his B.A. (1970) from Harvard University and his Ph.D. (1976) from Yale University. His main interests are comparative social policy and political economy, with area foci on Europe and the Caribbean. He teaches European politics and the political economy of advanced industrial societies. He is the author or co-author of four books including Capitalist Development and Democracy (winner, best book in political sociology) and Development and Crisis of the Welfare State (winner, best book in political economy) and numerous journal articles. <http://www.unc.edu/~jdsteph/index.html>

▲ Back to Top

GEORGE RABINOWITZ

George Rabinowitz (MA and Ph.D., University of Michigan) is a Professor of Political Science at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. His current teaching interests are American government, elections and public opinion, and American political culture. He believes all learning takes engagement, and tries to actively involve his students. His research is in the area of elections and voting behavior. He is currently working on a book dealing with the role of issues in elections. Prof. Rabinowitz has published extensively in professional journals, and has won two national awards for his research.

▲ Back to Top

DONALD SEARING

Burton Craige Professor of Political Science, Donald Searing writes on comparative politics, political psychology, and political elites. He has published articles on these subjects in The American Political Science Review, British Journal of Political Science, and most major professional journals in the discipline. He is currently engaged in three research programs. One concerns the impact of legislative experience on the political ideologies of politicians. Some of the results are reported in his book, Westminster's World: Understanding Political Roles (Harvard University Press). The second program, with Professors Pamela Johnston Conover and Ivor Crewe, is a study of the civic side of citizenship in the United States and Great Britain. This work has recently produced articles on citizen identities, conceptions of rights, tolerance, and political deliberation, which provide the basis for a book in progress, Citizenship in the Age of Liberalism. The third research program, with Professors Marco Steenbergen and Jurg Steiner, uses experimental research designs to investigate democratic deliberation in divided societies.

▲ Back to Top

MARCO STEENBERGEN

Associate Professor of Political Science, Marco Steenbergen received his M.A. in political methodology from the University of Amsterdam (Netherlands) and his Ph.D. from the State University of New York at Stony Brook. His research and teaching take place in three areas: (1) political psychology, (2) comparative politics, and (3) political methodology. In the area of political psychology, he has conducted research on voter decision making, political values, emotions, and information processing. In the area of comparative politics, he has done research on public support toward European integration, political parties, representation, and deliberation in legislatures. In the area of political methodology, he has published on measurement models and multilevel inference. Steenbergen is the co-author of Deliberative Politics in Action and the co-editor of European Integration and Political Conflict. He has published in the romance in fiction and the evolution of European integration and political control. He has published in the American Political Science Review, American Journal of Political Science, European Journal of Political Research, and Comparative Political Studies, among others. His current research focuses on the role of automaticity and ambivalence in political judgment and the deliberative potential in divided societies.

 Back to Top

MILADA VACHUDOVA

Milada Anna Vachudova, Assistant Professor of Political Science, specializes in the impact of international institutions on domestic politics, the enlargement of the European Union, and the democratization of post-communist Europe. She has previously held fellowships and research grants from the European University Institute in Italy, the Center for European Studies at Harvard University, the European Union Center of New York City at Columbia University, the Center for International Studies at Princeton University, the Belfer Center for Science and International Affairs at Harvard University, and the National Science Foundation. She received her first degree after study at Stanford University and the Institut d'Etudes Politiques in Paris. As a British Marshall Scholar and a member of St. Antony's College, she completed a D.Phil. in the Faculty of Politics at the University of Oxford. Her most recent book was Europe Undivided: Democracy, Leverage, and Integration After Communism (Oxford University Press, 2005). She has published on democratic consolidation and the reform trajectories of postcommunist states; on many facets of the enlargement of the European Union; on the EU's evolving immigration and security policies; on NATO's changing role in European security; and on the ability of international institutions to promote political and economic reform.

 Back to Top

Public Policy

DANIEL GITTERMAN

Dr. Gitterman is Assistant Professor of Public Policy and serves as Director of Undergraduate Studies. He holds adjunct appointments with the Department of Political Science and the School of Law. Dr. Gitterman received a B.A. from Connecticut College, M.A. from the University of Pennsylvania, and an A.M. and Ph.D. in Political Science from Brown University. Dr. Gitterman's research interests include: American welfare state; politics of health and social policy in the United States; labor markets and labor standards in comparative perspective.

 Back to Top

Romance Languages and Literatures (20th Century)

SAHAR AMER (ASIAN STUDIES)

Sahar Amer is Associate Professor of French as well as Asian Studies. She received her B.A./M.A. in French Literature from Bryn Mawr College in 1986, an M.A. in psychology from Boston University (1988) and a Ph.D. in French from Yale University (1994). Her research centers around 12th and 13th century French literature, more particularly around questions of multiculturalism and plurality. She is also interested in francophone literature (Africa and the Caribbean); Orientalism; cross-cultural relations between the Arab world and Europe throughout the centuries; Arabs and Muslims in France and in American today; cross-cultural constructions of gender and sexualities.

 Back to Top

MARTINE ANTLE

Martine Antle is Professor of French (Ph.D., University of California-Davis) and specializes in 20th century French and Francophone literatures and cultures. She teaches a variety of courses that focus on cultural diversity in France today, on European cinema, and that are devoted to questions of identity (French, Maghrebian, Vietnamese) and modernity. Her courses and her research address issues of language and nationalism, exile, immigration and identities. Her last book entitled The Cultures of Surrealism (2003) examines emerging notions of diversity in European vanguard movements from the 1920s to today. She is currently working on contemporary Francophone women artists of Arabic descent.

Professor Antle's faculty webpage

 Back to Top

MARSHA COLLINS

Marsha Collins is Associate Professor of Spanish and Assistant Provost for Women's Issues (MA, Ph.D. in Spanish, Princeton University). Her research focuses on two major areas, Golden Age Spanish Literature and 19th- and 20th-Century Spanish Literature. Her publications and her classes have a strong interdisciplinary bent, usually involving literature and philosophy or literature and the visual arts, with a strong emphasis on cultural contextualization, both national and international. She is the author of two books, one on the 20th-century novelist Baroja and the other on the 17th-century poet Gongora, along with articles on Unamuno, Galdos, Cervantes, and Lope, among others. Her current research involves techniques of visualization and the imitation of pictorial art in Golden Age Spanish Literature and new, interdisciplinary approaches to the European pastoral. She is a Fellow of the UNC Institute for the Arts and Humanities, a member of the UNC-CH Academy of Distinguished Teaching Scholars, and this year's recipient of the John L. Sanders Award for Distinguished Undergraduate Teaching and Service at UNC CH.

 Back to Top

DOMINIQUE FISHER

Dominique D. Fisher is an Associate Professor of French. She received her graduate degrees from La Sorbonne (D.E.S.S. in Social Psychology) and from the University of California, Berkeley (Ph.D. in French). She teaches literary and cultural theory, postcolonial theory, Francophone Studies (the Maghreb and Québec), European Studies, French Cultural Studies, post-romantic poetry and fin-de-siècle literature. Her recent publications include: Écritures de L'urgence . Paris: L'Harmattan (forthcoming), The Rhetoric of the Other: Lesbian and Gay Strategies of Resistance in French and Francophone Contexts . (with Martine Antle, 2003) and Perspectives in French Studies at the Turn of the Millennium. Studies in Twentieth Century Literature, vol 26/1, Winter 2002, 248 pp. with Martine Antle. Professor Fisher's faculty webpage

MONICA RECTOR

Monica Rector's career and interest have always been in Humanities, and she has taught in a number of different areas: language and linguistics, literature and communication, and semiotics. Her graduate studies were completed in Madrid, Spain, but she defended her thesis at the University of São Paulo (USP) in Neo- Latin Studies and completed another Ph.D. at the Universidade Federal of Rio de Janeiro (UFRJ). She came to the United States in 1987 as a visiting professor and permanently in 1989 to teach at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She is currently working with Portuguese and Brazilian literature with a focus on Portuguese Women writers. Her most recent publications include: O fraco da baronesa by Guiomar Torresão (co-author Luciana Namorato, 2005), Dictionary of Literary Biography. Brazilian Writers. (co-editor with Fred Clark, 2005), and Gestures: Meaning and Use (co-editor Isabella Poggi, 2003).

 Back to Top

Sociology

FRANCOIS NIELSEN

François Nielsen (Ph.D., Stanford University) is Professor of Sociology at UNC. His research and teaching interests include social stratification, macro-comparative sociology, social movements and collective behavior, organization theory, quantitative methods of data analysis, and the evolution of human behavior (sociobiology). He is currently doing research on the causes of income inequality by comparing income distributions across countries and among U.S. counties; on the emergence of sub-national (i.e., regional) representations in Brussels directed at the E.U. institutions located there; on the role of religion in the spread of industrialization in 19th century Europe; and on the role of scientific advisory boards in the survival and strategies of pharmaceutical firms.

 Back to Top

ANTHONY OBERSCHALL

Anthony (Tony) Oberschall (PhD Columbia University) is emeritus professor of sociology. His research and writing are on conflict and peace building in divided societies, with special emphasis on Northern Ireland, Bosnia, and Israel/Palestinians. Recent publications on these topics are "The manipulation of ethnicity: from cooperation to violence and war in Yugoslavia" Ethnic and Racial Studies 23 (6) Nov. 2000; "Terrorism" in Sociological Theory 22(1)March 2004; and with Michael Seidman, "Food Coercion in Revolution and Civil War: who wins and how they do it" in Comparative Studies in Society and History, 2005, pp.372-402. He is a consultant to the UN International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (ICTY) about the effects of nationalist propaganda in the upcoming trial of Vojislav Seselj.

www.unc.edu/~tonob

 Back to Top

