Dear Colleagues:

UNC-Chapel Hill is committed to giving undergraduates the opportunity to engage in original research, scholarship and/or creative performance. These experiences also provide tangible and intangible benefits to the mentors.

When I was an undergraduate at UNC, I did research with faculty members and was included in the research community of my department. It was a significant academic experience for me, and it actually determined my career.

We want to make similar opportunities available for all Carolina undergraduates. You can help, whether you are in the sciences, social sciences, fine arts, humanities or professional schools. Please post research, scholarship and performance opportunities in the database that the Office for Undergraduate Research has designed:
<https://cf.unc.edu/our/NEW%20FORMS/research.cfm> (you will be prompted for your onyen and password).

You can specify particular majors, particular times of year, and also indicate if the position could be volunteer, for pay or for course credit. The database provides a quick and easy way for undergraduates and prospective students to understand the opportunities to engage in the many facets of our research mission.

I look forward to seeing your postings.

Sincerely,

Holden Thorp
