Joint International and Interdisciplinary Conference:

Experience, Memory and Media:
Transmitting the Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars in 19th and 20th Century Europe

October, Thursday 11 – Saturday 13, 2007
University of Mannheim, Schloss, Senatssaal

Bios of the Paper Presenters, Commentators and Chairs

Richard Bessel
is Professor of Twentieth-Century History at the University of York. From 1993 to 2003 he was Co-Editor of the journal German History. His main fields of research are the social and political history of modern Germany, the aftermath of the two world wars and the history of policing. He is a member of the project board of the project ‘Nations, Border, Identities: The Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars in European Experiences’, funded by the Arts and Humanities Research Council. He currently is working on a study of Germany in 1945. His most recent publications include: ed. with Dirk Schumann, Life after Death: Approaches to a Cultural and Social History of Europe during the 1940s and 1950s (Cambridge, 2003); and Nazism and War (New York, 2004).

Horst Carl
is Professor of Modern History at the Justus-Liebig University of Giessen. His research focuses on Early Modern Central European History, in particular military, social and cultural history. He was a member of the research group ‘Experiences of War’ funded by the German Research Foundation and affiliated with the University of Tübingen and is now member of the research group ‘Memory Cultures’ at the University of Giessen and also Graduate Studies Executive of the International Graduate Center for the Study of Culture (GCSC). He works on public peace, military occupation and a project on ‘Experiences of War and religion in the Netherlands, Belgium and the Rhineland, 1792-1815’. His publications include: Der Schwäbische Bund 1488-1534. Landfrieden und Genossenschaft im Übergang vom Spätmittelalter zur Reformation (Leinfelden, 2000); ed. with Nicolas Buschmann, Die Erfahrung des Krieges. Erfahrungsgeschichtliche Perspektiven von der Französischen Revolution bis zum Zweiten Weltkrieg (Paderborn, 2001); and ed. with Hans-Henning Kortüm, Dieter Langewiesche and Friedrich Lenger, Kriegsniederlagen. Erfahrungen und Erinnerungen (Berlin, 2004).

James Chapman

is Professor of Film at the University of Leicester. His research focuses on British popular culture, especially cinema and television in their historical contexts. He is interested in the role of the mass media as propaganda, the representation of war and history, and the cultural politics of popular fictions. His publications include: The British at War: Cinema, State and Propaganda, 1939-1945 (London, 1998) and Past and Present: National Identity and the British Historical Film (London, 2005). He has also published widely on aspects of British popular culture, including Licence To Thrill: A Cultural History of the James Bond Films (London, 1999; second edition autumn 2007); and Inside the Tardis: A Cultural History of ‘Doctor Who’ (London, 2006). He is a Council member of the International Association for Media and History and is book reviews editor for the Journal of British Cinema and Television.

Philip Dwyer

is a lecturer in History at the University of Newcastle. His primary research interest is eighteenth-century Europe with particular emphasis on the Napoleonic Empire. His articles have appeared in the International History Review, German History, the European History Quarterly, and French History. He is currently writing a two-volume biography of Napoleon Bonaparte. His most recent publications include: Napoleon and Europe (London, 2001); The French Revolution and Napoleon. A Sourcebook (London, 2002); Talleyrand (Profiles in Power) (London, 2002); ed. with Alan Forrest, Napoleon and His Empire: Europe, 1804-1814 (London, 2007); Napoleon, 1769-1799: The Path to Power (London, 2007).

Steven Englund

is currently Directeur d’études at the Ecole des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales and Distinguished Professor at the American University of Paris (now part of New York University). He has written six books, including (as co-author with L. S. Ceplain) The Inquisition in Hollywood: Politics in the Film Community, 1930-1960 (Garden City, N.Y., 1980). His most recent work is Napoleon, A Political Life (New York, 2004) – a Main is a Professor of English Literature at the University of Wuppertal. She was a researcher at the Collaborative Research Centre ‘Memory Cultures’ (Sonderforschungsbereich 434 ‘Erinnerungskulturen’) at the University of Giessen from 2003 to 2007. Her main fields of interest are British literary and cultural history, cultural memory studies, war studies, media theory, and narratology. She wrote her dissertation on the memory of the First World War (Gedächtnisromane: Literatur über den Ersten Weltkrieg als Medium englischer und deutscher Erinnerungskulturen in den 1920er Jahren, Trier, 2003). In 2005 she published an introduction to interdisciplinary cultural memory studies (Kollektives Gedächtnis und Erinnerungskulturen. Eine Einführung, Stuttgart, 2005). She co-edited with Ann Rigney a volume on ‘Literature and the Production of Cultural Memory’ of the European Journal of English Studies, 10/2 (2006). Together with Ansgar Nünning she is editor of the series ‘Media and Cultural Memory/Medien und kulturelle Erinnerung’ (Berlin/New York: de Gryuter, since 2004) and co-editor of Cultural Memory Studies: An International and Interdisciplinary Handbook (Berlin, 2007, in print). She has just published a book on the representation of the ‘Indian Mutiny’ of 1857/58 in imperial and post-colonial media cultures (Prämediation - Remediation. Der indische Aufstand in imperialen und post-kolonialen Medienkulturen (1857 bis zur Gegenwart), Trier, 2007).

Astrid Erll

Alan Forrest

is Professor of Modern History and Director of the Centre for Eighteenth Century Studies at the University of York. He works on modern French history, especially on the period of the French Revolution and Empire, and on the history of modern warfare. His main research interests are the French Revolutionary period and especially the social history of the Revolution. He is interested in the political culture of Revolutionary France and in the concept of citizenship. He serves on the editorial boards of the journals French History and War in History, and is a member of the advisory committee for Annales historiques de la Revolution Francaise. He is also a member of the project board of the project ‘Nations, Borders, Identities: The Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars in European Experiences’, funded by the Arts and Humanities Research Council. His recent publications include: The French Revolution and the Poor (New York, 1981); Conscripts and Deserters: The Army and French Society during the Revolution and Empire (Oxford, 1989); Soldiers of the French Revolution
Étienne François

is Director of the Centre for French Studies and Professor of History at the Free University of Berlin. His research focuses on French, German, German-French and European Early Modern and Modern history, in particular social and cultural history. His special fields of interest are comparative history, transfer studies and the history of memory. He is a member of the project board of the project ‘Nations, Borders, Identities: The Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars in European Comparison’, funded by the German Research Foundation. His recent publications include: Die unsichtbare Grenze. Protestanten und Katholiken in Augsburg 1648–1806 (Sigmaringen, 1991); ed. with Hannes Siegrist and Jacob Vogel, Nation und Emotion. Deutschland und Frankreich im Vergleich. 19. und 20. Jahrhundert (Göttingen, 1995); ed. with Matthias Midell, 1968 – Ein europäisches Jahr? (Leipzig, 1997); and ed. with Hagen Schulze, Deutsche Erinnerungsorte, 3 vol. (Munich, 2001).

Karen Hagemann

is James G. Kenan Distinguished Professor of History at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Her research focuses on the history of eighteenth to twentieth century Germany and Europe, and women’s and gender history, in particular the history of welfare states, labor culture and women’s movements, as well as the history of the nation, the military, and war. She is a member of the project board of the project ‘Nations, Borders, Identities: The Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars in European Comparison’, funded by the German Research Foundation, and the project ‘Nations, Borders, Identities: The Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars in European Experiences’, funded by the Arts and Humanities Research Council. Her most recent books include: ed. with Ida Blom and Catherine Hall, Gendered Nations: Nationalisms and Gender Order in the Long Nineteenth Century (Oxford, 2000); ed. with Stefanie Schüller-Springorum, Home/Front: Military and Gender in 20th Century Germany (Oxford, 2002); ‘Männlicher Muth und Teutsche Ehre:’ Nation, Militär und Geschlecht zur Zeit der Antinapoleonischen Kriege Preußens (Paderborn, 2002); ed. with Stefan Dudink and John Tosh, Masculinities in Politics and War: Gendering Modern History (Manchester, 2004); ed. with Jennifer Davy and Ute Kätzel, Frieden – Gewalt – Geschlecht: Friedens- und Konfliktforschung als Geschlechterforschung (Essen, 2005); ed. with Michael Epkenhans and Stig Förster, Militärische Erinnerungskultur. Soldaten im Spiegel von Biographien, Memoiren und Selbstzeugnissen (Paderborn, 2006).

Guido Hausmann

is Lecturer in East European and Russian History at Trinity College, University of Dublin. His teaching interests are: history of Tsarist Russia and the Soviet Union, history of Poland and of Ukraine (16th century to 1991), comparative and transnational perspectives: history of Eastern Europe and Russia within European history and studies. Further he is interested in urban history; history of ethnic, national and confessional groups; history of universities and sciences; environmental history; cultures of memory and sites of memory (18th to 20th century). His recent publications include: Universität und städtische Gesellschaft in Odessa, 1865-1917. Soziale und nationale Selbstorganisation an der Peripherie des Zarenreiches. (Stuttgart, 1998); Die Überquerung des Flusses. Die Wolga als russischer Gedächtnisraum 17. bis Anfang 20. Jahrhundert (forthcoming).

Holger Hoock

David Hopkin

is Tutor (CUF) in Modern History at Hertford College at the University of Oxford. His main fields of interest are Britain and Europe in the Eighteen Century and Modern Britain and Europe. He is currently on AHRC funded leave, finishing a book on oral culture. He teaches on revolutionary Europe, rural societies, popular culture (visual as well as oral) and historical anthropology. He is also interested in the history of Europe’s regions, having written specifically about Lorraine and Brittany, and the interaction between society and disciplined institutions such as the army and the navy. His recent publications include: Soldier and Peasant in French Popular Culture, 1766-1870 (Suffolk, 2002); ‘Storytelling, Fairytales and Autobiography: Observations on Eighteenth- and Nineteenth-Century French Soldiers' and Sailors' Memoirs’, Social History 29/2 (2004); ‘Female Soldiers and the Battle of the Sexes in France: The Mobilisation of a Folk Motif’, History Workshop Journal 56/1 (2003). He is currently finishing a book on oral popular culture in France for Cambridge University Press, looking at how traditional genres were used as forms of communication in small, face-to-face communities.

Leighton James

is a Postdoctoral Research Fellow at the Centre for Eighteenth Century Studies at the University of York on the project, ‘Nations, Borders and Identities: The French Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars in European Experience’ funded by the Arts and Humanities Research Council. His research deals with the war experiences in the German-speaking area. He has previously worked and published on the social history of the south Wales and Ruhr coalfields in the late nineteenth century and early twentieth century. His publications include: ‘Towards

Catriona Kennedy

is a Postdoctoral Research Fellow at the Centre for Eighteenth Century Studies at the University of York on the project, ‘Nations, Borders and Identities: The French Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars in European Experience’ funded by the Arts and Humanities Research Council. Her research and teaching interests are the Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars in Britain and Ireland, the history of Irish nationalism, women’s and gender history, and the history of ideas. She is working on the post-doctoral project ‘Nations, Borders and Identities: The experience of the revolutionary and Napoleonic wars in Britain and Ireland, 1792-1815’. She has published ‘Womanish Epistles’: Martha McTier, female epistolarity and late eighteenth-century Irish radicalism’, Women’s History Review 13/1 (2004).

Wolfgang Koller

is Research Fellow and doctoral candidate at the Centre for French Studies at the Free University of Berlin. He is working on a project entitled ‘Nations, Borders, Identities: The Memories of the Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars in European Feature Films (1895-1945)’ in connection the project group ‘Nations, Borders, Identities: The Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars in European Comparison’, funded by the German Research Foundation. He participated in the exhibition ‘The World War 1914-1918. Event and Memory’ (Der Weltkrieg 1914-1918. Ereignis und Erinnerung) at the German Historical Museum in Berlin). His main fields of study have been Classical Mexican Cinema, German Cinema during National Socialism and historical picturisations.

Ruth Leiserowitz

is Postdoc Research Fellow at Berlin School for European Comparative History at the Free University of Berlin and works on a project on Polish and Russian memories of the Napoleonic Wars in connection the project group ‘Nations, Borders, Identities: The Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars in European Comparison’, funded by the German Research Foundation. Simultaneously she is Associate Professor at the University in Klaipeda/Lithuania. Her main fields of research are Modern and Contemporary history, European history, especially Baltic, Polish, and Russian history, cultural and social history as well as Jewish history. Her most recent publications include: Memellandbuch. Fünf Jahrzehnte Nachkriegsgeschichte (Berlin, 2002); Grenzregion als Grauzone. Heydekrug eine Stadt an der Peripherie Ostpreußens, in: ed. Christian Pletzing, Vorposten des Reichs? Ostpreußen 1933 bis 1945, (Munich, 2007); Experiences of Borders. Jewish Prospects of a Prussian Periphery (forthcoming, Dec 2007).

October 07, 2007
Jörn Leonhard

is Professor of Romance Western European history at the Albert-Ludwigs-University in Freiburg. His main research interests include European and Transatlantic history from the 18th to the 20th century with particular reference to comparative history, transfer, and entanglement analyses. His publications include over 70 articles and a number of edited volumes on themes of comparative European history (inter alia: Nationalismen in Europa: West- und Osteuropa im Vergleich, Göttingen 2001), as well as a comparative analysis of the concept of liberalism in European comparison from the late 18th century to the second half of the 19th century (Liberalismus. Zur historischen Semantik eines europäischen Deutungsmusters, Munich 2001) and a major study of the relation between war experiences and nation-building concepts in Europe and the United States from the 1750s to 1914 (Bellizismus und Nation. Kriegsdeutung und Nationskonzepts, in Europa und den Vereinigten Staaten, 1750-1914, Munich 2007, in print). He is currently working on a comparative history of multiethnic Empires in the 19th and early 20th century. This project received a major research grant by the Gerda Henkel Foundation in 2006.

Margarette Lincoln

Hans-Jürgen Lüsebrink

is Professor for Romance Studies at the University of Saarland. He hold the chair of Romance Civilization Studies and Intercultural Communication. His research focuses on French cultural history, in particular early Modern history and the history of the revolutionary and Napoleonic period. His publications include: ed. with Rolf Reichtart Handbuch politisch-sozialer Grundbegriffe in Frankreich 1680-1820 (Munich, 1990); ed. with Anthony Strugnell, L’Histoire des Deux Indes - Réécriture et Polygraphie (Oxford, 1995); Einführung in die Landeskunde Frankreichs (Stuttgart, 1999); ed. with Jean-Yves Mollier and Susanne Greilich, Presse et événement, XVIII-XIXe siècle (Gazettes, journaux, almanachs); La conquête de l'espace public colonial. Studien zu den frankophonen Literaturen außerhalb Europas, vol. 7 (Frankfurt am Main, London, Québec, 2003).
David O’Brien

Marina Peltzer

Erich Pelzer

is Professor of Modern History at the University of Mannheim and Vice-Dean of the Faculty of Philosophy. His research focuses on Early Modern West European History, in particular political, social and cultural history. His main research interests are the French Revolution and the Era of Napoleon. He is currently preparing a new biographical study on Napoleon and his times: Napoleon Bonaparte. Biographie eines europäischen Monarchen (Stuttgart, 2008, forthcoming). He has edited several volumes: ed. French Revolutionary Pamphlets (Leiden, 1996); ed. French Revolutionary Periodicals (Leiden, 1999); ed. French Revolutionary Opinions. The Trial of King Louis XVI, 1792-1793 (Leiden, 2001). His most recent publications include: Die Wiederkehr des girondistischen Helden. Deutsche Intellektuelle als kulturelle Mittler zwischen Frankreich und Deutschland während der Französischen Revolution (Bonn, 1998), and Revolution und Klio. Die Hauptwerke zur Französischen Revolution (Göttingen, 2004).

Lars Peters

is Research Fellow and doctoral candidate at the Centre for French Studies at the Free University of Berlin. He is working on a project entitled ‘Nations, Borders, Identities: The on Irish and British Memories of the Napoleonic Wars’ in connection the project group ‘Nations, Borders, Identities: The Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars in European Comparison’, funded by the German Research Foundation. His main fields of research are Modern British and Irish History, Western European History, Gender History, Cultural and Military History.

Marie-Louise von Plessen

Rolf Reichardt

is Professor h.c. for Modern History at the Justus-Liebig-University Giessen. His main fields of research are memory of the French Revolution in European prints from 1789 to 1889, history of Transnationale Medienereignisse. Numerous articles and several books concerning French and european visual culture from the 17th to the 19th century: Bildgedächtnis eines welthistorischen Ereignisses. Die ‘Tableaux historiques de la Rivolution française’ (Göttingen, 2001); Das Blut der Freiheit. Französische Revolution und demokratische Kultur (Frankfurt am Main, 2002); Symbolische Politik und politische Zeichensysteme im Zeitalter der französischen Revolutionen (Münster, 2004); Visualizing the is Honorary Fellow in the History Department at the University of York. Her research focuses on eighteenth and nineteenth century British and comparative women's history, and particularly in Scottish women's history and the Scottish Enlightenment. Her publications include: The Origins of Modern Feminism: Women in Britain, France, and the United States, 1780-1860 (Basingstoke, 1985); Equal or Different: Women’s Politics 1800-1914, editor (Oxford, 1987); Writing Women’s History: International Perspectives, co-edited with Karen Offen, and Ruth Roach Pierson (Basingstoke, 1991); Defining the Victorian Nation: Class, Race, Gender and the British Reform Act of 1867, author with Catherine Hall, and Keith McClelland (Cambridge, 2000); Eighteenth-Century York: Culture, Space and Society, co-edited with Mark Hallett (York, 2003).

Jane Rendall

Rainer Rother

Kirstin Schäfer

is Postdoc Research Fellow at the Centre for French Studies at the Free University of Berlin with the research project entitled ‘Nations, Borders, Identities: The French Memories of the Napoleonic Wars’ in connection the project group ‘Nations, Borders, Identities: The Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars in European Comparison’, funded by the German Research Foundation, 1999-2001 she was a research fellow at the Free University of Berlin in the project ‘Deutsche Erinnerungsorte’. Her main research fields are the history of mentalities and cultural history, military history, the history of nation, nationalism, and national movements in Europe, the history of the memories of the Napoleonic Wars in the 19th and 20th centuries (main focus: France). Her most recent publication: Hitlers erster Feldmarschall. Werner von Blomberg. Eine Biographie (Paderborn, 2006).
Maria Schultz

Mary Sheriff

is W.R. Kenan, Jr. Distinguished Professor of Art and Chair of the Department of Art at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. She studies eighteenth- and early nineteenth-century European art and publishes on French visual culture. Her interests include gender and sexuality in the visual arts and cross-cultural exchange and the problem of nationalism. She has published three books with the University of Chicago Press: J.H. Fragonard: Art and Eroticism (1990); The Exceptional Woman: Elisabeth Vigée-Lebrun and the Cultural Politics of Art (1996) and Moved by Love: Inspired Artists and Deviant Women in Eighteenth-Century France (2006). From 1993-1996 she was co-editor of the journal Eighteenth-Century Studies; and she has edited several other volumes including the Special Issue: ‘French History in the Visual Sphere: Convergences: Visualizing French History’, French Historical Studies 26/2 (2003). She is currently editing Cultural Contact and the Making of European Art for the University of North Carolina Press and preparing a new book ‘From Cythera to Tahiti, the Enchanted island in Eighteenth-Century France.’

Bernhard Struck

is Lecturer in Modern History at the University of St. Andrews. His main research fields are Germany in the 18th and 19th centuries, the history of travel and travel writing, the history of cartography and science in the 19th century, representation of space and conceptions of borders; trans-national, comparative history; history of cultural transfers (Germany, Poland, France, Italy). His publications include: Nicht West – nicht Ost. Frankreich und Polen in der Wahrnehmung deutscher Reisender zwischen 1750 und 1850 (Göttingen, 2006); Die Welt erfahren. Reisen als kulturelle Erfahrung von 1780 bis heute, ed. with Hans Erich Bödeker and Arnd Bauerkämper (Frankfurt am Main, 2004); Die Grenze als Raum, Erfahrung und
Marie-Cecile Thoral

Jakob Vogel

is Deputy Director of the Centre Marc Bloch, Berlin. His main fields of research are European history of the eighteenth to twentieth century, the history of the nation and nationalism, the history of science, knowledge and experts, transnational and colonial history. His publications include: Nationen im Gleichschritt. Der Kult der ‘Nation in Waffen’ in Deutschland und Frankreich (1871-1914) (Göttingen, 1997); with Bernd Ulrich and Benjamin Ziernmann Untertan in Uniform. Militär und Militaris mus im Kaiserreich 1871 – 1914 (Frankfurt am Main, 2001); ‘Der Undank der Nation. Die Veteranen der Einigungskriege und die Debatte um ihren ‘Ehrensold’ im Kaiserreich’, in Militärgeschichtliche Zeitschrift 60 (2001); Ein schillerndes Kristall. Eine Wissensgeschichte des Salzes zwischen Frühneuzeit und Moderne (Cologne, 2007, in print).

Colin White

is Director of the Royal Naval Museum in Portsmouth Historic Dockyard. He is a Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries of London and of the Royal Historical Society and a Vice President of the Navy Records Society. His research focus is the social, historical and cultural change in Europe. His publications include: The Nelson Encyclopaedia, Chatham Publishing and the Royal Naval Museum (London, 2005); Nelson - the New Letters (Woodbridge, 2005); Nelson the Admiral (Stroud, Gloucestershire, 2005); 1797: Nelson’s year of Destiny (Stroud, 2006). His current research project is The Nelson Letters Project, with the aim to locate, transcribe and, as appropriate to publish, unpublished letters written by Nelson.
George S. Williamson

is Associate Professor of History at the University of Alabama, where he specializes in modern German history and modern European cultural and intellectual history. He is the author of The Longing for Myth in Germany: Religion and Aesthetic Culture from Romanticism to Nietzsche (Chicago, 2004). His article, ‘What Killed August von Kotzebue? The Temptations of Virtue and the Political Theology of German Nationalism, 1789-1819,’ The Journal of Modern History 72/4 (2000), was named best article for 1999-2000 by the Conference Group for Central European History of the American Historical Association. He is currently expanding his study of the Kotzebue affair into a book-length monograph.