WORLD VIEW
K-12 Global Education Symposium

“Bringing World Cultures to the Classroom”

October 22-23, 2008
The Friday Center, Chapel Hill

World View, with co-sponsors the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction and the Center for International Understanding, will be presenting the eleventh annual Symposium.

As the world’s national boundaries continue to dissolve, students today need to learn how to work and live with others from different cultures, speaking multiple languages, and practicing varying religions. It’s time to prepare our students for a global society. World View’s symposium offers educators from all subject areas and in all grade levels techniques for integrating global content across the curriculum, as well as other global education resources. There will be general sessions, concurrent sessions on both content and classroom applications, and support for school-based teams in creating an Action Plan for globalizing schools. CEU credits will be offered.

Registration is $150 per person.
A Team of 4 is $500 (save $100). A Team is comprised of 4 or more individuals from a school or district. Only $125 for each additional Team member.

For more information please call (919) 962-9264 or visit www.unc.edu/world