

Harrison Carter
Union
TRT: 1:02

<<anchor>>

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is constantly working on a 50 year construction plan. When a long term project is completed students and faculty can get excited. Harrison Carter Reports.

<<Nats “the carolina spirit is alive and well in this place”/clap>>

<<track>>

The Frank Porter Graham Student Union finally reopened Tuesday following a 3 and a half year renovation. At noon the university community gathered for a ribbon cutting ceremony to celebrate the completion. Freshmen Julie Soforenko came to the ceremony

<<JSbite>>

“I’ve seen all the construction that’s been going on all year and its exciting to see whats in the new facility.”

<<track>>

Director of the Carolina Union Don Luse is ready for students to take advantage of the new and improved union.

Harrison Carter
Union
TRT: 1:02

<<DLbite>>

“Students can look forward to using more meeting rooms uh and program spaces in the union and the Great Hall is a great addition now for student programs.”

<<track>>

The finished product has made some older students like Junior Amy Ryan forgive the past closings for construction

<<ARbite>>

“The opening of the new union today has made it worth the wait with all the construction and all the busyness and everything.”

<<track>>

Luse said that room has been left for improvement, but the union is open and the lengthy renovation process has ended. From Chapel Hill this is Harrison Carter

Reporting.