Joint International and Interdisciplinary Conference:

Experience, Memory and Media:
Transmitting the Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars in 19th and 20th Century Europe

October, Thursday 11 – Saturday 13, 2007
University of Mannheim, Schloss, Senatssaal

Sponsored by the University of Mannheim, the German Research Foundation, the Center for French Studies at the Free University of Berlin, the Foundation of the Landesbank Baden-Württemberg, and the Heinrich-Vetter-Stiftung, Mannheim

Program

“In the beginning was Napoleon” – this famous sentence from Thomas Nipperdey’s History of Germany applies also to large parts of Europe. Notwithstanding Nipperdey’s strong focus on the person of Napoleon it seems unquestionable that the Napoleonic Empire and the French Revolution, which preceded it constituted a crucial turning point in European history. The military expansion of France ensured that hardly any part of Europe remained untouched by these revolutionary transformations. Both the wider population and the soldiers directly involved in the fighting were drawn into the vortex of the wars, which raged across Europe between 1792 and 1815. Influenced by the experiences and memories of these wars, the self-perceptions and the perceptions of the other held by the inhabitants of European states and regions changed fundamentally. Unlike any other era, the period of 1792–1815 created ideas of ethnic, religious and national identity.
The experience and memory of the Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars had an enduring influence on the collective memory of all European nations and regions and have given them an international dimension. Since summer 2005 the Anglo-German project Nations, Borders and Identities has been analysing the experience and memory of the Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars within a comparative European perspective, while paying particular attention to issues of national transfer. The project concentrates on France, England and Ireland, Austria and Prussia, Poland, and Russia. The aim of this conference is to discuss this research in a broader European context. The main focus will be the transmission of experience and memory through the various media, which constitute their material dimension. While the proponents of different theoretical approaches – Aby Warburg, Pierre Nora, Aleida and Jan Assmann – emphasise the importance of the media in constructing collective experience and memory, this has so far rarely been analysed in a comparative and trans-national perspective or across different disciplines.

Aleida Assman with her research on forms and transformation of cultural memory is one of the few scholars to have worked intensively on the relationship between media and memory. She assumes that individuals, collectives and cultures construct their memory interactively, through communication in language, images, and cultural practices. It is only through codification in cultural objects – texts, pictures, items, symbols and rituals, etc. – that the content of communicative memory can be detached from the communicative discourse of limited and transient social groups, saved over time and finally reworked into a part of cultural memory. Individuals, collectives and cultures equally organise their memory with the aid of external storage media and cultural practices. Without these the construction of generational and epoch-bridging memory is impossible. This also means that the type, character and development of the media affect the transmission of memory and therefore change the formation of collective and cultural memory. As experiences and communicative memories are so closely related and both are to an important extent formed by the media that transmit them, the NBI project intends to relate in this conference the analysis of experience, memory and media.

Each medium offers us a specific insight into experience and communicative and cultural memory. Writing, following language, encodes differently from visual images. These are independent of language and can encode non-verbal experiences and impressions. This is also the case with the new medium of film. Objects, monuments and places can become media of memory and commemoration. They encode memory in a further way. All material media of memory share the ability to confirm and save for posterity, even beyond periods of collective and cultural oblivion, individual or collective experiences which were at one time regarded as important and memorable and were encoded in some way. The process of remembering is then a dynamic one: the medium revives (but also transforms) latent experience and memory, while experience and memory interpret the medium.

Central to this conference are the most important media for the transmission of experience and memory in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries that helped to form the perception and commemoration of the Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars in different regions of Europe. In the course of the conference a range of media will be examined in an interdisciplinary, long-term perspective. These include autobiographies, historical novels, plays, poems and songs, visual images (especially paintings and prints), historical films. It is the aim of the conference to explore the specific ways in which these media "work"- how they encode and release information and their different effects on the shaping of experience and memory. Central questions include:

- Which specific theoretical and methodological approaches regarding the analysis of media of experience and memory have been developed, and which have proved most fruitful?
- In what ways have different media shaped experiences and memories of the period of the Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars?
- What is the potential impact of the respective media? What are their limits? What can they encode? Who uses them? Whom could they reach?
- How far are convergences and divergences (with regard to the images and narratives) encouraged by the respective media of memory? To what extent is it the medium itself that dictates these divergences?
- How have technological innovations and changing markets in literature, culture and art affected the shaping of experiences and memories?

Thursday, October 11, 2007

Registration and Welcome Coffee
8:00 – 9:00 a.m.

Welcome and Introduction
9:00 – 9:30 a.m.
- HANS-WOLFGANG ARNDT (PRESIDENT, University of Mannheim)
- ERICH PELZER (University of Mannheim, Department of History)
- KAREN HAGEMANN (University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Department of History)

I. Comparisons and Transfer of War Experiences and Memories- Theoretical and Methodological Reflections
9:30 – 10:30 a.m.

Chair: ERICH PELZER (University of Mannheim, Department of History)
- ALAN FORREST (University of York, Centre for Eighteenth Century Studies): The Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars in Contemporary Experience
- ETIENNE FRANÇOIS (Free University of Berlin, Centre for French Studies) : The Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars as a Shared and Entangled European lieu de mémoire

Coffee Break

II. Experiences and Memories in Personal Writings
10:45 – 1:15 p.m.
Chair: KAREN HAGEMANN (UNC at Chapel Hill, Department of History)

- MARIE-CECILE THORAL (University of York, Centre for Eighteenth Century Studies): Diaries and Carnets de route of French Soldiers as a Material for the Elaboration of a Memory of War
- CATRiona Kennedy (University of York, Centre for Eighteenth Century Studies): Reading, Writing and Fighting: British Soldiers’ Reading and the Experience of War, 1793-1815
- LEIGHTON JAMES (University of York, Centre for Eighteenth Century Studies): 'The Whole Man': Austrian Officers' Narratives of the Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars
- PHILIP DWYER (The University of Newcastle, Faculty of Education and Arts): French Military Memoirs and the Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars

Comment: HORST CARL (University of Giessen, Department of History)

Lunch

III. Collective Memory in Historical Novels

2:30 – 4:45 p.m.

Chair: RICHARD BESSEL (University of York, Department of History)

- LARS PETERS (FU Berlin, Centre for French Studies): Warrior Sailors and Heroic Boys: The Narrative Imagining of Masculinities in Popular British Historical Novels on the Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars
- KIRSTIN A. SCHÄFER (FU Berlin, Centre for French Studies): Text and Image: The Napoleonic Wars in French Historical Novels and their Illustrations
- MARIA SCHULTZ (Berlin School for Comparative European History): Archetypes from the Past: Gender Images in German and Austrian Historical Novels on the Napoleonic Wars

Comment: ASTRID ERL (Bergische Universität Wuppertal, Department of English Literature)

Coffee Break

IV. Collective Memory in Literature

5:15 – 7:30 p.m.

Chair: KAREN HAGEMANN (UNC at Chapel Hill, Department of History)

- BERNHARD STRUCK (University of St. Andrews, School of History): France and Poland in German Travel Reports during and after the Napoleonic Wars
- RUTH LEISEROWITZ (Berlin School for Comparative European History): Female Heroism: Gender Images in Russian Memoirs and Historical Novels of the “Patriotic War” of 1812
- DAVID HOPKIN (University of Oxford, Hertford College): The Soldier's Fairytale: Oral Tradition as an Expression of Soldiers’ Experience and Vehicle for Memory of the French Wars

Comment: GEORGE S. WILLIAMSON (University of Alabama, Department of History)

Reception and Dinner

Restaurant Rheinterrassen (Rheinpromenade 15)
Friday, October 12, 2007

V. Experience, Memory and Visual Representation
9:00 – 11:30 a.m.
Chair: JANE RENDALL (University of York, Centre for Eighteenth Century Studies)

- ROLF REICHARDT and MARINA PELTZER (University of Giessen, Department of History): Transnational War of Images in Caricatures against Napoleon: The British and the Russian Case
- DAVID O’BRIEN (University of Illinois, Urbana, Department of Art History): Napoleonic Painting, Memory, and the Museum

Comment: MARY SHERIFF (UNC at Chapel Hill, Department of Art History)

Coffee Break

VI. Memories and Cultural Practices
12:00 – 1:30 p.m.
Chair: ALAN FORREST (University of York, Centre for Eighteenth Century Studies)

- HOLGER HOOK (University of Liverpool, School of History): British War Monuments of the Napoleonic Wars in a Comparative Perspective
- COLIN WHITE (Royal Naval Museum): The Immortal Memory - Celebrating the 200th Anniversary of Nelson and Trafalgar

Comment: MARIE-LOUISE VON PLESSEN (La Motte)

Lunch

3:00 – 5:00 p.m.
Chair: KAREN HAGEMANN (UNC at Chapel Hill, Department of History)

- GUIDO HAUSMANN (Trinity College, University of Dublin, Department of Russian and Slavonic Studies): The Wars of 1812 in Russian Material Memory
- JAKOB VOGEL (Centre Marc Bloch, Berlin): The Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars in French and German Celebrations of the 50 and 100 Years Anniversaries
- MARGARETTE LINCOLN (National Maritime Museum): Commemoratives and Kitsch: The Napoleonic Wars and Everyday life in Britain

Comment: JÖRN LEONHARD (University of Freiburg, Department of History)

Coffee Break
Public Evening Lecture
Napoleon and his Legacy in European Memory

Universität Mannheim, Schloss, Manfred-Lautenschläger-Hörsaal 0 163.
5:30 – 7:30 p.m.

- STEVEN ENGLUND
  (Directeur d'études at the Ecole des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales and Distinguished Professor at the American University of Paris)

Chair: ERICH PELZER (University of Mannheim, Department of History)

Dinner

Ristorante La Piazza (Rheinhäuserstrasse 8)
8:00 p.m.

Saturday, October 13, 2007

VII. The Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars in Feature Films
9:00 – 11:00 a.m.

Chair: ETIENNE FRANCOIS (FU Berlin, Centre for French Studies)

- WOLFGANG KOLLER (FU Berlin, Centre for French Studies): Heroic Times: Gendered Images of the Anti-Napoleonic Wars in German Feature Films of the Interwar Period
- JAMES CHAPMAN (Leicester University, Department of Art and Film): British Cinema and the Napoleonic Wars

Comment: RAINER ROTHER (German Cinemathek, Berlin)

Coffee Break

XIII. Round Table
Experience, Memory and Media – Rewriting the History of the Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars in a European Perspective
11:30 – 1:00 p.m.

Chair: KAREN HAGEMANN (UNC at Chapel Hill, Department of History)

- RICHARD BESSEL (University of York, Department of History)
- JANE RENDALL (University of York, Department of History)
- HANS JÜRGEN LÜSEBRINK (University of the Saarland, Department for Romance Languages)
- MARY SHERIFF (University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Department of Art History)
Lunch
Restaurant Rheinterrassen (Rheinpromenade 15)
1:30 p.m.

Registration
Deadline: September 30, 2007
Registration Fee € 25,00 (Student participation is free)
Berliner Bank AG, Kontonummer: 3901 999 303, BLZ: 100 200 00,
Verwendungszwecke: 0013091104 (Mannheim).
Registrationform on the Website: http://www.nbi.tu-berlin.de/Workshops.htm

Conveners
• KAREN HAGEMANN (University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Department of History)
• ERICH PELZER (University of Mannheim, Department of History)
in cooperation with
• ARND BAUERKÄMPER (Berlin School for Comparative European History)
• RICHARD BESEL (University of York, Department of History)
• ALAN FORREST (University of York, Centre for Eighteenth Century Studies)
• ETIENNE FRANÇOIS (FU Berlin, Centre for French Studies)
• JANE RENDALL (University of York, Centre for Eighteenth Century Studies)

Organisation supported by
• ULRICH PÄßLER (University of Mannheim, Department of History)
• RUTH LEISEROWITZ (Berlin School for Comparative History)
• KIRSTIN SCHÄFER (Free University of Berlin, Centre for French Studies)

Contact Address
DR. RUTH LEISEROWITZ
Free University of Berlin
Berlin School for Comparative European History
Koserstr. 20
14195 Berlin, Germany
Email: <leiserowitz@nbi.tu-berlin.de>